

Memory drugs

From the brain chips of humans are unnecessary memories that can't be completely deleted because even if they were they'd still exist just corrupted inside of the brain

so instead of deleting them they transfer that data onto piles and piles of data barrels

So people who're poor and are unable to afford any education steal those barrels from garbage mountains to either distil the memories into liquid and drink it which gets them sick and drunk for a year and in a homeless lifestyle it's not easy to live that long with brain sickness and horrible useless memories or the harder method of making a computer to transfer that data into to then choose which memories to transfer into their brain IF they happened to have a brain chip

But there was one homeless old man with almost full robotic body who lost all of his riches buying up all of the barrels created by elderly people such as him who remember the brutality of the wars and rise of hopelessness when technology took their jobs making it even harder to live their lives he didn't want the barrels to be destroyed he didn't want any other person to get sick listening to the wishes of the dead neither

He wanted to remember all of those lost soldiers and poor civilian workers who couldn't provide for their families to let them live on inside of his own head

But over time with his human mind the pain of remembering them all was getting to him forcing him to make himself more and more robotic until even he didn't know if he had any resemblance of humanity left and instead started thinking himself as a library of deaths in 2029 until finding a human child who lost his parents who learnt to grief the death of his parents but also move on and try to forget the pain with his weak human mind letting the old man get a new chance at life and remind him of who he is he isn't a robot he's a human who can mourn deaths and remember people to let them live on but not allow the sadness of everyone's losses take over him to either force himself to stay in the past and remind himself of death of people in every single different perspective or trying to completely ignore it while it eats away at his soul

this is again just a concept but also I'd like to mention that this will just be a part of an overall story mom told me on its own it would be a bit too short so maybe I could connect this back to another robot story with a kid that realized the world is messed up

Also it would give the kid a better reason to stop other humans because some robots still have human brains and humanity in them and they're treated like any other robot because people who rose up the ranks were born around the time where it was normal and expected for you to hate ai and robots even if they were part human or not

Which will also mean it would be more likely for them to enjoy themselves in virtual worlds instead of living an actual life in reality and allowing themselves to become lesser versions of themselves by doing the same thing again and again and again for entertainment because they used to doing it when they were so desperate jobless and likely to die in a war

And then giving robots ability to feel their version of emotion and grief allowing them to suffer making the humans that much more cynical and mad my story isn't creative by any means which I still hate about it but at least I'm having fun making a world up

Even if I still hope I add something original in them when my brain gears start working like maybe the madness of the child trying to overthrow humanity for what they've done to robots making him seem more like a villain in the end when he tries killing ALL the humans including the poor people who're so desperate they're in a perpetual state of sickness and drunkenness

Making himself the same thing he hated stopping the whole operation and ending his life but still making humans rethink their values considering how far a human non the less a child was willing to fight to defend robots and end their mindless enjoyment if they were in the right or wrong in the scenario

... yeah they're still not creative enough and pretty dumb because the internet would totally believe of the opposite just to make themselves feel like they're in the right and refuse change at all costs

And if that's happening today imagine a worse future they wouldn't be as drunk as the desperate poor trying to find useful memories and information in towers of nightmares but be more delusional and stupid than them so it would make sense for any rational human being to hate them and hold such rage towards them losing themselves in their rage and thinking they represent all of humanity even though there are still kind people who know what pain feels like and the consequences of being a lazy PIECE OF... ~~censored~~—wait no I have a better ending for that one

Me

I am a lazy piece of stupidity one of many In this cruel place called internet in which somehow I feel better about being myself when I compare myself to the lowest of lows when I shouldn't be and should be bettering myself through and through every single day like how I used to try to

Also yes this is definitely inspired ( or completely ripped off ) from a video game Bonelab and series Rick and Morty

Bonelab for barrels of useless memory

And rick and Morty for learning how to grief in a healthy way and get over it

I really miss making these and maybe I should put more text changing tools to emphasize things that I say and break the 4th wall

(I'll probably forget this so I'm writing it down)

so yeah that's it actually I also wonder about what the title "memory drugs" could be made into like what kinds of stories there could be like drugs made to create false memories

Or people being addicted to easy way of knowledge but losing their own memories by the brain being unable to remember that much data

Or witches from forests turning depressed suicidal humans into drugs to then hide it in the king's food to force him to kill himself overthrow the castle and find her lost brother in the cages of the castle who from sheer accident was forced to spend his life behind bars and from the torture in his prison turned into an actual monster everyone else thought he was from the beginning

Okay that one just came out of nowhere but you know what I mean